

Seeds of Justice

“Seeds of Justice helped me develop my personal passions, build a foundational understanding of a wide variety of social justice issues, and meet brilliant people who care about the same things that I do.”

Seeds of Justice is a student-led social justice and leadership development program for 20 incoming first-year students during the academic year. Through regular cohort sessions, community explorations, and meetings with community and student leaders, students will reflect on meaningful service and raise their awareness of complex social justice issues in Chicago in order to take action. Apply today: UCSC.uchicago.edu/seeds

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

University Community Service Center

bridging campus and city

Program: Tuesday evenings during the academic year beginning Week 4 of fall quarter; some weekend excursions and community explorations. Applications Due: Monday 10/2